Before joining Sher Tremonte, Caroline was an intern for the Washington D.C. Public Defender Service where she gained her passion for advocacy and her eye for detail. Combining those skills with the ones she learned as an intern researching provenance for Christie's auction house allowed her think critically and quickly address client needs. When she was at Vanderbilt University, she was the leader of the school's Vanderbilt's Generation Action for Planned Parenthood chapter where she advocated for the rights of women in Tennessee and around the United States.
