Esther provides assistance across virtually all practice areas, including business litigation, white collar defense, regulatory proceedings, and pro bono matters. Her contributions include deposition preparation and procedure; witness preparation; legal research and writing; and proofreading, cite-checking, and formatting of court submissions and filings. Esther's work is characterized by sharp critical thinking, efficient time management, and a diligent attention to detail.

Prior to joining the firm, Esther served as a professional development associate at the Netter Center for Community Partnerships in Philadelphia, a program director at the University of Pennsylvania Civic House, and an editorial associate at the Lien Centre for Social Innovation in Singapore. She maintains an avid interest in comparative constitutional law and the impacts of democratization on national minority groups and rights.
