Raphael's practice focuses on white-collar criminal defense and complex commercial litigation. Clients facing legal challenges, including potential loss of their liberty, value Raphael's tenacity and his personalized approach to advocacy.

In both civil and criminal matters, Raphael truly gets to know his clients, enabling him to craft creative and effective solutions to tough legal issues. Raphael also dedicates a significant portion of his time to the firm's Pro Bono and Indigent Defense practices. He recently co-authored, with Noam Biale, an amicus brief filed in the U.S. Supreme Court in a case concerning criminal forfeiture. His legal scholarship has appeared in prominent law journals.

During law school, Raphael interned in the U.S. Attorney's Offices for the Eastern and Southern District of New York, where he assisted with numerous high-profile criminal cases. Prior to law school, he worked as a paralegal in a boutique litigation firm concentrating on complex products liability matters.
