Robert brings a strong client focus to his complex commercial litigation practice. Clients value his ability to simplify the intricacies of technical litigation and formulate strategies that help them achieve their goals.

Whether advising on a business breakup, a commercial contract matter, or an action involving confidential information, Robert is adept at navigating complex legal territory to secure optimal outcomes.

Before joining Sher Tremonte, Robert was an associate at Wollmuth Maher & Deutsch LLP, where he represented individual and institutional corporate clients in commercial litigation matters involving antitrust, securities, and business law, as well as clients in bankruptcy adversary actions and arbitration. During law school, Robert interned at the New York Attorney General's Office in the Antitrust Bureau, assisting in investigations into anti-competitive and monopolistic practices.
